Would Forfeit Whisky.

United States Marshal Stephen G. Sharp, who has been in Maysville several days taking an inventory of the stock seized by the Government of Poyntz Bros., of that city, wholesale whiskey dealers, has posted notices to the effect that goods and personal property seized by the Collector of Internal Revenue amounts to $9,265.51, and that the trial praying judgment and forfeiture of sale thereof will be heard before Federal Judge Cochran in Covington, November 10.

Squelched Completely.

She glided into the office and quietly approached the editor's desk. "I have a poem," she began.

"Well?" exclaimed the editor with a look and tone intended to annihilate her, but she calmly resumed:

"I have written a poem on 'My Father's Barn,' and—"

"Oh!" interrupted the editor, with extraordinary suavity, "you don't know how relieved I am. A poem written on your father's barn, eh? I was afraid it was written on paper and that you wanted me to publish it. If I should ever happen to drive past your father's barn I'll stop and read that poem."

Wealth of Mrs. Davis.

It has been estimated by persons who were closely connected with the late Mrs. Jefferson Davis, who was buried at Richmond, Va., the other day, that she left an estate valued at about $40,000. During the latter days of her life Mrs. Davis acknowledged to supplement her income with her pen. She had a dignified position to maintain, which necessitated the use of much money.

President Davis was himself very wealthy, but when he held the office of secretary of war his expenses exceeded his income. Mrs. Davis claimed no honors for herself, but she would suffer no disparagement of the honors to which she believed her famous husband was entitled.

Papers of rare historic value which she left, and which came into her hands on her husband's demise, are daily enhancing in value. She had a Mississippi plantation that brought her an income of about $1,000.

Desha Breckinridge Assaulted.

While Mr. Desha Breckinridge, editor of the Lexington Herald, was talking in a civil manner to Mr. Lawrence Jones, one of the State Agricultural Commissioners, in the dining room of the Seelbach, in Louisville, Friday, Mr. Breckinridge turned his face from Mr. Jones to speak with a friend who had spoken to him when Jones hit him a blow on the side of the face, breaking his glasses and cutting his face. The gentlemen had had some disagreement about the State Fair, but the assault on Mr. Breckinridge was wholly unexpected at the time. It was with difficulty that Mr. Breckinridge was kept from getting to Mr. Jones after the cowardly lick.

Mr. Breckinridge, in the Lexington Herald of Saturday, above his own signature denounced Jones as a cad and coward, and from newspaper accounts of the affair Jones deserved the denunciation.

Desha Breckinridge is one of the most polished gentlemen in Kentucky, and a man not afraid to resent an insult, and it is a pity he was not allowed to get his hands on this man Jones, just to show him that Bluegrass editors know how to mop up with such cattle.

A Youthful Suicide.

A girl only eight years old committed suicide in Vienna, Austria, not long ago, by throwing herself from the window of her mother's house in to the street. The child had an intense dislike for school work and spent her days wandering about the streets. The police took her home to her mother, who threatened to punish her, and locked her in a bed room. A few minutes later the child was found dead upon the pavement.

Salt Luxury.

Salt is the greatest luxury known in Central Africa. In some sections among the poorer inhabitants salt is never used. Even among the better classes a man who eats salt with his food is considered a rich individual. In some tribes where salt is so scarce children are so fond of it that they may be seen eating it just as other children would eat pieces of lump sugar.
